

But tonight — there is something new. A light she has never seen before, low and steady and much brighter than the rest. It does not twinkle the way stars do. It just shines, calm and still.