

Iris tiptoes to the window and presses her nose against the cold glass. Stars - so many stars - are scattered all the way across the dark sky. She has never tried to count them all before. She wonders if anyone ever could.