

She begins to count: one, two, three - but before she reaches ten, there are already ten more she has not seen yet. She tries again from a different patch of sky. There are too many stars. There are more stars than Iris has words for.