

She tipped her head all the way back.

The tree went up forever. Past her tallest reach, past where the squirrels lived, past every branch, all the way up to where the sky waited between the leaves at the very top.